Hard Choices: The Decisions Professional Services Firm Leaders Can't Afford to Delay

Following the highly successful Leadership Circle in Copenhagen, CM Murray and Lexington Consultants invite you to join us in London for a candid discussion on one of the greatest challenges facing professional services firm leaders today: identifying the right decision and taking it at the right time.

The most difficult leadership challenges rarely arise because the issues are unclear. More often, leaders know the questions that need to be addressed. The challenge lies in deciding what action to take, when to take it, and how to bring others with them.

Whether the issue concerns succession, governance, partner performance, remuneration, investment, growth or transformation, effective leadership often requires difficult decisions to be made before circumstances force them upon the firm.

Through an interactive case study and facilitated discussion held under the Chatham House Rule, participants will explore how successful leaders recognise critical decisions early, navigate competing pressures, build support for change and act with confidence.

Building on themes explored in Copenhagen, this session will focus not only on what firms should do, but on how leaders make and implement difficult decisions in practice.
